

Global Research and Development Program Management

BioNTech Industry Profile

for

sub-Saharan Africa Health Research and Innovation (SAHRI) Fellowship Program

Summary	Fellows will gain experience in supporting the management of R&D projects and programs by overseeing planning, execution, monitoring, and reporting to enable informed decision-making. They will develop skills in managing project and program timelines and budgets while collaborating with cross-functional teams to design strategies and detailed plans that advance research assets through preclinical, translational, and clinical development phases.
Qualifications	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Holders of advanced degree in life sciences or medicine Knowledge of pharmaceutical discovery and therapeutic knowledge in infectious diseases
Planned Tasks and Activities	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Support program management activities, including planning, execution, monitoring, reporting, and decision-making. Manage timelines and budgets for assigned projects and development programs. Learn to develop program strategies that drive programs through key milestones. Collaborate with the team to create detailed project plans to successfully advance research assets through preclinical, translational, and clinical development phases. Ensure integration and execution across all functional areas to achieve the program's development goals and the team's success (scope, budget, time, quality). Provide operational support for project and program team meetings, including organization, preparation, documentation, and follow-up. Support procurement, commercial, licensing, partnering, and intellectual property activities related to the programs. Facilitate strong cross-functional communication by building effective working relationships within the team and across the organization. Help foster a culture of achievement and accountability within teams.
Location	Germany , Virtual /Hybrid participation not possible